The low weight and high strength of acrylic sheets, the light shaping and cutting ability, the high breaking strength, the clarity and the glossy colour selection have opened up new ways for modern architects to bring their concepts to life. From stairs to windows to lighting, from domes to arches to bridges, acrylic films enable unusual and unforgettable architectural applications. AQUARIUMAcrylic leaf natural clarity, strength and light weight shows the splendor of life underwater while withstanding the pressure of water. Almost all major public aquariums now build display cases with acrylic foil and create safe, fantastic displays that they can enjoy. Compared to glass, acrylic film is a far superior material for these applications, as it is easy to shape, break-resistant and lighter and yet stronger than glass in addition to its natural clarity. This makes acrylic film an excellent choice for aquariums, especially in busy or public areas. AUTOMOTIVEThe modern automotive industry integrates acrylic plates for products in many parts of assembled items. The high impact resistance of acrylic sheets, the excellent optical properties, the heat and chemical resistance, the excellent weathering properties and the low weight of the acrylic sheet are the most diverse automotive applications. Acrylic sheet can be easily thermoformed into the necessary aerodynamic shapes. No wonder, then, that a whole range of superior automotive products are produced from acrylic sheets, including windshields, side panels and headlight protectors. BOAT WINDOWSStronger than glass and lighter, slightly thermoformed and in a available from tinted shades including UV-stabilized types, modern leisure boat windows are made of acrylic foil without exception. Not only are they easier to manufacture and install, but they are also more resistant to breakage, but they are also more durable, so that crew and passengers can navigate equally and see the view under Conditions. Whether in the form of chairs, tables or other applications, acrylic foil furniture certainly gives the surroundings an elegant, modern touch. GREENHOUSESA crucial component in today's food production chain, greenhouses are also a source of joy for many flower lovers. Clear, high-gloss acrylic film is a popular material for greenhouses due to its low weight, superior light transmittance, weather resistance and breaking resistance. At half the weight of glass, acrylic leaf is far less likely to break. Plants grow under these materials just as well as under glass without the risk of possible glass breakage. LIGHTINGMany of the applications available today in the consumer, industrial and office lighting markets use lavish acrylic panels. Acrylic film is used in light diffusion panels or covers, globes and luminaires for indoor and outdoor lighting. It is weather-resistant, has good impact resistance, comes in many colors and achieves its diffusing properties with opals, colors or a matte surface effect. MEDICALMany medical applications use acrylic film thanks to their good transparency, clarity, non-reactive and non-toxic nature, resistance to degradation by cleaning products, malleability, easy cleaning and breakage resistance. Modern infant incubators are routinely made of acrylic film, as are tanning booths. New medical components and health devices are continuously produced from acrylic films, which use the outstanding safety and hygiene features of the acrylic film. PICTURE FRAMESToday, traditional glass picture frames are often made of acrylic film due to their low weight and high impact resistance. At Half of the glass weight and tenfold impact resistance, acrylic film is particularly suitable for large or oversized works of art. It provides increased protection against breakage and eliminates the risk of framed art or photography as well as protecting the people around them from potentially dangerous fractures, an important feature in crowded environments or houses with active children or pets. In addition, acrylic film can protect against UV damage. These features make them most suitable for a variety of applications, including cosmetic stands, perfume testers, showcases, shelves, poster frames and projection screens. From simple shop fittings to elaborate custom-made films, acrylic films can be easily cut, glued or thermoformed to produce your desired product. SKYLIGHTAcrylic panel skylights provide natural illumination and bring the sunshine inward. They save energy by reducing the required artificial lighting and, if planned accordingly, maintaining the insulation properties of the buildings. Other advantages of acrylic plates include improved installation safety due to superior breaking strength compared to glass, excellent light transmittance and reduction of UV transmission. Acrylic film is not only safer, but is also half as heavy as glass and easier to install and makes a long-term investment for a building. SOUND BARRIERSound barriers must be made of durable materials suitable for outdoor use. Acrylic film has been successfully used worldwide for this purpose. Easy to shape, manufacture and install, acrylic sound barriers are durable and break-resistant and come in clear as well as coloured variations. Its transparency preserves the natural view from the road or rail and blends into the landscape. Above all, however, acrylic sound proof walls have been shown to successfully reduce noise pollution in built-up residential areas. P100 from 1st order. Min. spend P1000.
